The amendment filed June 7, 2006 has been entered but in view of the newly discovered prior art, prosecution of this application continues.

Claims 15, 16, 22, 23, 26 and 28-43 are allowed.

Claims 6-8 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3-5, 9-13, 24 and 25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Seiden (5,288,512) as further evidenced by Ghosh, Geller, Dull and Noureddini taken together.

Seiden discloses a reduced calorie <sup>fat</sup> oil made by interesterifying tri behenin with medium chain triglycerides to achieve a triglyceride composition with the fatty acid composition of the claims (see example 1 and Table 5). The claims appear to differ from Seiden in the use of the composition as a pan release composition but preamble limitations do not alone carry any patentable weight in product claims. The claims also appear to differ from Seiden in the recitation of the viscosity of the oil. The secondary references to Noureddini and Dull are cited as evidence to show that viscosity of oil is known and predictable in the art from the chain length of the fatty acids in the composition. Geller is cited for evidence that the viscosity of oils is known in the art to go up with increasing chain length (Figure 3). Ghosh is cited to show that interesterification of one oil with another can result in the reduction in the viscosity of the oil (see abstract). This evidence taken together demonstrates that viscosity of oil is an inherent property of the interesterified blend of Seiden. The secondary references also provide evidence of that the range of viscosity values for fats of similar chain length falls within the range of the claims (see Table 1 of Noureddini and Dull). It is appreciated that the particular source of long chain fatty acid of claim 25 is not mentioned but no unobvious or unexpected result is seen from the selection of one long chain fatty acid source over another.
